HACK EXPOSES 412M ADULT WEBSITE USER CREDENTIALS

Login credentials for over 412 million users of adult websites run by California-based FriendFinder Networks Inc. were compromised last month in the largest hack of 2016, according to breach notification website LeakedSource.com. Compromised data includes nearly 340 million credentials for Adultfriendfinder.com, which bills itself as "the world's largest sex and swinger community," some 63 million records from video sex-chat site cams.com and about 7 million records from adult magazine site Penthouse.com, LeakedSource said in a blog published on Sunday. Representatives of FriendFinder Networks, one of the world's biggest adult website operators, could not be reached for comment on Monday. REUTERS

UPS AIR MAINTENANCE WORKERS VOTE 98 PERCENT TO STRIKE

Air maintenance workers at United Parcel Service Inc have voted overwhelmingly to authorize a strike against the world's largest package delivery company as contract talks remained deadlocked over health care benefits, the workers' union said on Monday. Teamsters Local 2727 said 98 percent of those who took part in a mail-in ballot voted to authorize strike action. Eighty percent of the local's 1,200 members participated in the ballot. Contract talks have been ongoing for three years. If they remain deadlocked Monday, union representatives say they will begin the process that could lead to a strike within 60 days. The main sticking point has been healthcare benefits. The Teamsters say UPS is demanding major concessions, including a massive spike in retiree contributions for health-care costs. REUTERS

SAMSUNG TO BUY CAR TECH COMPANY HARMAN FOR $8 BILLION

Samsung Electronics has agreed to buy Harman International Industries in an $8 billion deal, marking a major push into the auto electronics market and the biggest overseas acquisition ever by a South Korean company. The transaction highlights Samsung's efforts to break into the high-barrier automotive industry where it has little track record and also marks a strategic shift for the electronics company, which has previously shunned big acquisitions. "An M&A deal this big is a first for us. But it shows that under Jay Y. Lee, the company is changing and open to new ways to grow," a source familiar with the deal told Reuters, referring to Samsung Electronics' vice chairman. REUTERS

Mass. pro-choice groups vow to fight Trump on abortion

"In this political environment, Massachusetts must be a national leader in removing barriers to health care, including safe, legal abortion."

@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Massachusetts pro-choice activists are concerned about the state of reproductive rights after President-elect Donald Trump voiced his desire to repeal Roe v. Wade, which would turn abortion rights over to the discretion of individual states.

When pressed by CBS' Lesley Stahl on "60 Minutes" Sunday night about if this meant some women wouldn't be able to get abortions, Trump said that "they'll perhaps have to go, they'll have to go to another state."

Roe v. Wade has ensured the constitutional right for women to get abortions since 1973. The National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League (NARAL) of Massachusetts was founded in 1972 before the court's decision, but its work didn't stop when Roe v. Wade became the law.

"It's important to remember that the work to advance reproductive rights didn't start with this election and it was never going to end with this election," said Christian Miron, deputy director of NARAL Massachusetts.

Though Massachusetts has made historic leaps in social rights, abortions were still illegal here before the implementation of Roe v. Wade. Speaking about that time, Miron said that "abortions that were had were not safe, were not legal and women had to travel great distances."

"And under Donald Trump's presidency, that horrible reality is much closer than we would have ever wanted it to return," he said.

New England did play a part in advancing reproductive rights in general, though. Before Roe v. Wade, there was Griswold v. Connecticut, which challenged a Connecticut law that criminalized the use of or encouragement of (via a doctor or other health professional) birth control.

Griswold v. Connecticut, which was decided in 1965 by the Supreme Court, established a constitutional right to privacy, but only in marital relationships, still essentially banning all birth control to those who weren't married. Then came Eisenstadt v. Baird, which sparked a birth control fight from the campus of Boston University.

Christian Miron

William Baird, a reproductive rights activist, gave away birth control (specifically Emko vaginal foam) after his lecture on BU's campus. He was arrested and charged what was then a felony: distributing contraceptives to unmarried men and women, because under the law per Griswold v. Connecticut, only married people could get birth control.

In 1971, the Supreme Court struck down the Massachusetts law and allowed unmarried couples the same access to contraceptives as those who were married.

"If the right of privacy means anything," wrote Justice William J. Brennan, Jr. for the majority, according to the Oyez Supreme Court archive, "it is the right of the individual, married or single, to be free from unwarranted governmental intrusion into matters so fundamentally affecting a person as the decision whether to bear or beget a child."

Though the state of reproductive rights is not perfect anywhere, Miron notes, Massachusetts is prepared to continue this fight, especially in light of Trump's remarks.

"I think each state faces its own unique challenges as it relates to a Trump administration attack on reproductive rights and abortion," he said. "All I can say is here in Massachusetts, we are prepared and more motivated than ever to ensure that Massachusetts is a beacon for reproductive freedom."

Harvard community demands protection for undocumented students

Students, staff and faculty of the elite university delivered a petition asking the administration to protect undocumented students.

@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metrouis

In the wake of President-elect Donald Trump's win and his recent comments on immigration, undocumented college students are mobilizing for their own protection.

More than 100 Harvard University students, staff and faculty gathered in front of Widener Library on Monday to urge the administration to protect undocumented students. More than 4,000 Harvard University students have signed a petition demanding action from the university administration, according to student paper The Harvard Crimson.

"Harvard's mission demands that the administration move beyond releasing a statement and implement concrete actions that protect all Harvard students—especially those members of our community who have been targets of discrimination during a hate-filled and anxiety-inducing election cycle," the petition reads.

"Harvard seeks to identify and to remove restraints on students' full participation, so that individuals may explore their capabilities and interests and may develop their full intellectual and human potential," the mission statement reads in part.

The petition addresses that specific objective, saying that it is "more pressing than ever" under a Trump administration.

"What does the election of Donald J. Trump mean to the undocumented students currently enrolled at Harvard?" the petition asks the administration. "Trump's first change to immigration policy will in all likelihood affect these students, many—if not all—of whom currently benefit from President Obama's executive order: Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA)."

Monday afternoon, Harvard students, staff and faculty stood in front of Widener Library as undocumented students shared their stories and read the petition out loud before delivering it to the administration. One student captured in video said there were at least 40 undocumented students at Harvard and that the issue affects "so many people, so deeply."

Dr. Loc Truong, director of diversity and inclusion at Harvard, said in an email to The Boston Globe that the university's offices will work to help undocumented students.

"We know this is a time of uncertainty and we will partner with undocumented students and all students during this uncertain time, as we share the same goal—to enable students to thrive here at Harvard College," he said in an email.

AG launches hotline for reporting post-election harassment

State officials are hoping a new hotline will help them combat instances of harassment and intimidation based on race, gender or sexual orientation in the wake of last week's presidential election.

Attorney General Maura Healey's office launched the hotline Monday in response to a growing number of reports of hate crimes and intimidation across the country.

"There are reports from around the country following the election that people have been targeted and subjected to conduct that imperils safety and civil rights," Healey said in a news release. "Today, I am establishing a hotline for residents to report bias-motivated threats, harassment, and violence. Such conduct has no place in Massachusetts."

In Natick, police reported on Monday that a resident was receiving racially-charged threatening letters. In another incident, an MBTA train was taken out of service temporarily after someone scrawled graffiti that read "Stop being racist against white people," across the top of the train.

Healey urged any Massachusetts resident who has witnessed or experienced bias-motivated threats, harassment or violence may call the Attorney General's Hotline at 1-800-994-3228, fill out a civil rights complaint on the state's website or reach out to them through Twitter or Facebook. ERIN TIERNAN

Arts in the Aftershock

It's been exactly one week since the election and I'm scared. I'm a bi-racial, son of an immigrant, who runs a ballet company, dance school, and holiday production whose missions are all the same--promoting diversity through dance.

The result of this election has shook me to the core; I'm nervous.

Protests are ringing in the streets. Hijabs are being forcibly removed from heads. Swastikas are popping up on public landmarks. This is a race war on the "others" in our lives. How can we defeat this? Where do we go from here? No doubt there are difficult days ahead.

Our show, the Urban Nutcracker, purposely portrays a reflection of our diverse America onstage every night. Our dance school and professional company share the same array of skin colors and body types. Different should be in demand. Religion is a right. Skin color is a celebration. Diversity is who I am and what I have worked my entire life to showcase.

We weren't sure we were appreciating our audiences enough, so we decided to offer two specialty productions of our show. For years we've been including our sensory-friendly show for attendees on the spectrum of Autism, as well as an LGBTQ+ celebration show as a dedication to our LGBTQ+ population. Our communities across this city see their people on stage, a literal reflection of the audience watching back.

Art is for all audiences.

Thankfully we are in Massachusetts, a highly liberal society. Perhaps you are nodding your head right now and applauding diversity and the arts as a whole. Awesome! But do more. Please. Let the little girls and boys know that they can be anything they want to be. Let the arts heal them during this time, just like it can heal you. Imagine someone like Misty Copeland only receiving principal dancer status at this late juncture in her life after years of being in the corps. But now try to imagine that progress starting tomorrow under a presidency that doesn't value all of the colors of flesh in the crayon box. I fear we were dealt a devastating setback here, and we will have to fight back for decades to get back to this level again.

But I believe in the cathartic healing of dance.

I believe in the embracing warmth of the arts. So I'm asking-begging you-to immerse yourselves. Support your local community theatre. Donate to your favorite opera. Purchase a pair of shoes for a dancer that can't afford them. Give a dollar to a licensed metro busker. Attend a dance show, even if it's in the cheap seats. Buy three tickets even, and bring a friend and their child. Not just with us-- go see our competitors' productions even! Just help the arts, especially those who value a diverse America. Show the world that the arts don't discriminate. Set an example.

"This is precisely the time when artists go to work." -Toni Morrison Maple Street resident receives threatening, racially charged letters.

Natick police are investigating a series of threatening letters left on a resident's doorstep this weekend.

A Maple Street resident told police he received two racially charged letters. The first was a handwritten note found around 10 a.m. Thursday and a second typed letter was found around 7 p.m. Friday. The handwritten letter contained profanity and racial slurs.

The second letter stated, "We have reclaimed our country back by selecting Trump ..."

It warned the resident not to bring people of color into the neighborhood.

"This kind of behavior is not indicative of the values in the town of Natick and will not be tolerated in our community," Police Chief James Hicks said in a news release.

"The department is taking this case very seriously and we will investigate to our fullest capabilities to ensure the safety and security of our residents."

There have been no other reports of similar letters.

Anyone with information regarding either incident is asked to contact the Natick Police Department at 508-647-9500.

BRIEF

Hundreds evacuated after fire at Lawrence school

Students and staff were evacuated from a Lawrence elementary school Monday when a fire broke out in a second-floor science lab.

Firefighters arrived around 8:30 a.m. and were able to extinguish the flames, but the Bruce School building is uninhabitable due to smoke and water damage, WBZ reported.

No one was injured and no students were in the classroom when the fire broke out, but all 525 students and 70 teachers were evacuated, WCVB reported.

Students were taken to the nearby Guilmette School to finish out the day.

Kendall Jenner deletes Instagram

Kendall Jenner's Instagram account is gone. Vanished. Disappeared into the internet abyss. Haven't we been through enough this month already?

The supermodel deleted her social-media account Sunday, according to Perez Hilton. This move comes just days after Kendall's alleged stalker, who was convicted only of trespassing for showing up at her house and following her into the driveway in August, was released from jail. There's a good chance that she made the move to feel safer and protect herself from unwanted attention.

Kendall's Twitter and Facebook account are still active. However, Kim hasn't updated her page in over a month, making us down two "KUWTK" kast mem-

Lindsay Lohan name dropped in Vegas battery case

Imagine this: You're in Vegas and two Russian dudes rush your hotel room with questions about a girl you met at a music festival several months before. You tell them you've stayed silent about the girl in question but they beat you up anyway.

It's like a tale straight out of "The Hangover."

But it's real life. And the unnamed

24-year-old guy that reported this story to police says actress Lindsay Lohan is the mystery girl responsible for all the attack. According to the police report obtained by TMZ, the victim met Lohan at Coachella in April. While he was staying at Excalibur in Vegas last month, the two henchmen confronted him about allegedly talking smack about the actress. Coincidentally, Lindsay used to date a Russian, Egor Tarabasov, whom she claimed was abusive.

Lindsay denies that she even knows the guy, and police say he isn't cooperating with the investigation, so the case has been closed. But to stay on the safe side, don't mess with Lindsay.

'Real Housewives of Atlanta' star Apollo Nida engaged in prison

Love trumps hate ... and apparently, jail. Apollo Nida, the ex-husband of "Real Housewives of Atlanta" star Phaedra Parks, is serving an eight-year prison sentence for his involvement in a massive money-fraud scheme. Apollo checked in for his sentence in September 2014.

But before he did, he snagged himself a new boo — and now, they're engaged! Sources close to the "RHOA" production team told TMZ both Apollo and his new mystery lady have shot scenes for the coming season. They're keeping then fiancée's identity a secret until the episode airs.

Apollo, however, will "appear" via phone. We doubt all that camera equipment would ever make it through security at a federal penitentiary.

Kourtney Kardashian and Scott Disick spark romance rumors

Kourtney Kardashian and her babydaddy, Scott Disick, have had a tumultuous on-again, off-again relationship for the past 10 years. The couple officially called things off in 2015.

But photos of the couple on a family vacation in Cabo St. Lucas, Mexico, this weekend have many fans raising their eyebrows. The paparazzi snapped pics of the couple in their bathing suits looking cozy and happy.

While E! News insists that this getaway is just a continuation of the friendship that the duo — who have three children together — established since their separation, none of us are convinced. We agree with sister Khloé's "KUWTK" assessment of the situation: They're definitely getting back together. It's just a matter of when.

Don't fall for it, Kourtney!

The Boston Comedy Fest boasts zero tolerance policy on not being funny.

BRENDAN MCGUIRK
@BrendanMcGuirk
letters@metro.us

Sometimes, you have to laugh to keep from crying.

Those looking for a reprieve from the hard realities of the world are in luck, as the Boston Comedy Festival is being held this week at locations throughout Somerville and the area. The festival unites familiar and emerging comics doing their professional and semi-professional best to find the funny in what is, to many, a trying time.

The celebration of comedy, organized and founded by local funnyman Jim McCue, features acts like Eugene Mirman, Lenny Clarke, "Daily Show" correspondent Konny Chieng and Barry Crimmins — fresh off a Louis C.K.-backed comedy special. Patty Ross and John Ratzenberger will be honored as Comedian of the Year and for a Lifetime Achievement Award, respectively, and a contest will see 96 talented comics competing in a comedy tournament for a top prize of $10,000.

We spoke with McCue about the week's slate, when he thinks comedy matters most and what makes Boston a unique scene for comedy.

Do you think there are times when comedy is more essential, or plays a different role in people's conversations?

It's always the jester — the fool is the only one who can speak truth to power, sometimes. You can make fun of the king, in front of the castle, and sometimes not to the benefit of the fool. We live in interesting times and I think that comedians need to be able to say things; everybody has their own buttons. What's offensive to me is not offensive to somebody else. It's the only art form that's created onstage in front of people, and sometimes a joke isn't finished the first time you do it.

Given the national tenor, have you noticed audiences being particularly primed to laugh recently?

So we have Barry Crimmins coming on Saturday, and he's an activist and a humorist. Louis C.K. recently produced a special with him — if you want to have this discussion, that show is where to have it. We have another guy named Eino Phillips who's simply one of the best joke writers in the world, genius. I think there's a lot of people that just feel like "Look, we've been through a lot, we just want to escape from it," and we've got a lot. We have a "No Politics" show this year, so if you want to go and just laugh — everybody so desperately needs to laugh. That's the role of comedy, to say, "The world isn't a perfect place, what we need to do, as a people, as a country, as a world is go, 'We can laugh about it, put our shoes on, and try and fix it tomorrow.'"

What do you think of the contestants for this year's comedy competition?

Me. Myself, as a comedian, I gotta tell you, it's threatening to me. Because I'm like, "Oh my god, I've got to write more. They keep coming in waves, please stop!" The producer part of me is very proud, because we've found great acts right before they hit. A lot of people that we've had at the festival, I was down at the Comedy Cellar in New York, and they're in the lineup! They're in the mix, they're on "Conan," so this is cool. We get to see them five minutes before they take that next step. A lot of them are getting their agents, getting their managers out of Boston. We have a great product, we're putting them in a very competitive situation and they've already been vetted, and passed a couple hundred shows to get here. So now you've got the cream of the crop boxing it out to get into the Somerville Theatre, which we pack every year.

Boston has a long and storied comedy tradition, what do you think makes it a unique place for onstage humor?

I've always said, oddly enough, it's the audiences. The competitive nature of Boston people — you have Harvard professors and MIT students and Tufts and then you have working class people, and they just don't tolerate not funny. The guys older than me, they just had no tolerance for not doing your own acts of not being funny. If you want that stage time, it's valuable property here. It's an amazing place to do comedy.

The festival plays on through Nov. 19, at The Rockwell, Once Somerville, ImprovBoston, Great Scott, the Somerville Center for Arts at the Armory and the Somerville Theatre. See bostoncomedyfest.com for more details.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Steve Martin studied philosophy in college. He's written novellas, he's an avid art collector and he's starred in dramas like "Pennies from Heaven" and "The Spanish Prisoner." Oh, and he's also released numerous stand-up albums, wrote and starred in countless comedies like "The Jerk" and is a comic genius. He likes both high and low, which is why it's no shock he's in "Billy Lynn's Long Halftime Walk," the latest from two-time Oscar-winner Ang Lee. He has a small role: The film centers around an Iraq War soldier (played by Joe Alwyn) who reminisces about his traumatic tour while his troop is honored at a football game. Martin plays the scheming owner of the Dallas Cowboys, who's trying to help snag them a movie deal.

Since "Billy Lynn" is a drama, I wanted to ask about 1981's "Pennies from Heaven," where you have dance numbers interspersed with some of the saddest dramatic scenes ever committed to film. That was a fantastic process. I had to learn to tap dance. [Laughs] And I love the premise of the movie. I met Dennis Potter [the writer], and I had seen the original BBC television version. I was so knocked out by it. I was honored to be in it.

See Steve Martin, as a scheming NFL team owner, in Ang Lee's "Billy Lynn's Long Halftime Walk," in theaters Friday. SONY

Was it hard convincing the filmmakers you could do a serious movie at that point? I actually believe the movie was so uncommercial that the studio wanted someone commercial. That's how I got it. Because I had just finished "The Jerk," and that was a big hit. I was ready to go, because I didn't know where to go with comedy anymore. I think I really got it by default.

You've had dramatic roles throughout your career since, too. One of the best is David Mamet's "The Spanish Prisoner," where you're actually terrifying. I loved doing that. Although I feel even in comedies, like "Father of the Bride" or "Cheaper by the Dozen," there's actually drama in those movies. There's very emotional scenes between the father and the kids or the father and the wife.

And there's always the argument that all comedy is serious and comes from a darker place. Well, no, I don't make that argument. [Laughs]

With Mamet, you're almost a kind of puppet. He has very precise dialogue and very precise ways you're supposed to occupy space in the frame. That's fine with me. I took pride in doing what he wanted and saying his dialogue exactly as written. Sometimes you have to find a way into it. With "Waiting for Godot" [which he did onstage in the '80s] the dialogue is often broken and short and it stops and starts over. I realized, in life, that's the way people talk.

And you don't want to riff on Beckett, or on Mamet. No, no. [Mamet's] very particular about that. Even with the "uhs." He writes in all the "uh" and the "ers."

If you missed an "uh" or an "er," would he yell at you? I don't think so. But I tried to keep them all anyway.

Michelle Obama: First lady of style

We recall the looks that defined her years in the White House

LUZ LANCHEROS
Metro World News
lancheros@metro.us

There is so much we'll miss about Michelle Obama: her elegance, her kindness, her vegetable garden, her appearance on "Carpool Karaoke" and of course, her fire wardrobe choices. The first lady — a Harvard-educated lawyer from the South Side of Chicago — enchanted the country with her spirit and her style.

And much of her sartorial success is thanks to her stylist, Meredith Koop, who has been with the FLOTUS since 2009. She started her career as a sales associate at Chicago's high-end Ikram boutique, where the two met.

With Koop's guidance, the first lady has dazzled in great American designers, such as Ralph Lauren, Oscar de la Renta, Carolina Herrera, Michael Kors, Narciso Rodriguez, Joseph Altuzarra and Naeem Khan, among others. But more important, she helped put up-and-coming designers on the map, as well as elevate the fashion cred of more accessible brands, like J. Crew and Ann Taylor.

The first lady understands that fashion communicates an important message to the public. During state visits, she pays respect to each country by championing local designers. In Tokyo, she wore Kenzo and in London, Christopher Kane. She shows cultural and social awareness and never draws criticism for squandering the public's purse on high fashion. In fact, she pays for them herself.

She has also embraced the media, the December issue marks the third time the first lady's has graced the cover of American Vogue. And her work is reflected not only in her popularity, but as a trendsetter. The Narciso Rodriguez dress she wore for her husband's State of the Union speech sold out, despite its hefty $2,095 price tag.

Can her successor follow in her footsteps? It's too early to know. But Michelle Obama will go down in history as a woman who knew how to play politics with fashion. We take a look at some of her recent fashion hits.

WHEN SCHOOLS SAY THEY OFFER STUDENT SUPPORT, WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

It could mean a lot of different things. At Bay State College it means we understand that going back to school is a big decision. And, it means we understand your concerns about succeeding at the college level. That's why, regardless of how you see yourself doing in college, we see an opportunity to help you realize your potential with a community of support.

What else does it mean? It means that admissions counselors can show off our campus, answer your questions and guide you through our selection process—even before you apply. It means helping 95 percent of this year's freshman class receive grants or scholarships that don't have to be repaid. It means personal success coordinators and a closely-knit student body that can help make America's biggest college town feel a little more like home.

In the classroom, it means a wide variety of Associates and Bachelor's degree programs in such in-demand fields as healthcare, business, fashion, criminal justice and more. No matter which program you choose, it means learning in small classes from accessible professors with real-world experience in their field.

To fit your schedule, it means making classes available at night or online.

As you advance toward your degree, it means having a personal career advancement team. It means helping you write cover letters and resumes, creating mock job interviews and using social media to help you get noticed. It means internships at some of Boston's best companies and organizations to build working relationships with people that can help you find a full-time position doing what you love.

In the end, what does it all mean? It means that at Bay State College, we care as much about your comfort as we do your success. It means we're committed to providing you unmatched student support throughout your college journey. It means that going back to school doesn't mean going it alone.

Barron's: For-profit colleges could prosper under Trump

For-profit education stocks have surged on expectations that President-elect Donald Trump and a Republican Congress may ease regulations imposed on the industry by the Obama administration, Barron's said in a report.

Stocks such as Grand Canyon Education, DeVry Education Group and Capella Education rose about 14 percent last week. Trump won an upset victory in Tuesday's presidential election.

Jeff Silber at BMO Capital Markets said Trump's election could be good news for for-profit education companies, according to Barron's.

Need for healthcare professionals predicted to skyrocket

Cambridge College offers adult learners innovative, affordable programs in this growing field

It's a $3 trillion + industry – and it's growing. According to Forbes magazine, this is how much the United States spends annually on healthcare costs.

What accounts for the surge? Experts note that there are several reasons, including:

- An aging population that is living longer – and staying more active – than ever before.
- Increased demand for mental health counseling with an emphasis on prevention and wellness.
- A growing opioid epidemic in the US, particularly among young people.
- Sophisticated medical treatments that mean increasing demands for medical and healthcare management professionals to manage the business side of healthcare.

Cambridge College has a proven track record of helping adult learners get the in-demand skills necessary to succeed and to meet the needs of today's healthcare employers. By offering both undergraduate and graduate degrees in many areas of healthcare, Cambridge College prepares students for a variety of careers in this fast-growing industry.

Undergraduate degrees include a bachelor's of science in health and wellness promotion, healthcare management and psychology, and a certificate in addiction studies. Graduate level programs include certificates in autism, applied behavior analysis, school health, rehabilitation and addictions counseling, as well as master's degrees in counseling, psychology and an MBA in healthcare.

The school is even offering a new Accelerated BS to MBA Program where adult learners can graduate with both their bachelor's and a master's degree in five years, rather than the traditional six.

All programs are designed to fit the needs, schedules, and responsibilities of adult learners. Courses are offered in Cambridge, Lawrence, Springfield, Puerto Rico, and Southern California weekends, evenings and online.

MAKE HEALTHY YOUR NEW HAPPY

Getting an IUD: What to consider

Women are rushing to make appointments before Trump's inauguration.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Following Donald Trump's win Tuesday, you may have seen a trend on your social-media feeds: Many women are talking about getting IUDs (intra-uterine devices) before the president-elect's January inauguration. And it's not just online chatter: Planned Parenthood representatives have reported an increase in calls made to schedule IUD appointments in the last week.

Women are concerned about losing access to contraception, preventative and procedural, under a Trump presidency. There is ample reason to be worried: Trump has said in his 100-day plan he plans to repeal the much of the Affordable Care Act, which requires insurers to cover FDA-approved methods of birth control, from pills to IUDs.

He's also been vocal about appointing anti-abortion Supreme Court justices, with the goal of getting Roe vs. Wade overturned. He said Sunday on "60 Minutes" that if the decision were returned to the states, some women seeking abortions "would have to go to another state."

While we can only guess what Trump might accomplish during his term, it can't hurt to prepare for the worst-case scenario. An IUD, which is effective for three to 10 years depending on the type, is the most effective birth control method — at more than 99% effectiveness, according to Planned Parenthood. Getting one now could safeguard you against unwanted pregnancy through a Trump presidency and beyond.

While effectiveness is the main draw, convenience is a big bonus. No need to remember any pills or prescriptions or shots or fuss with sponges or diaphragms. (But condoms are always a good idea if you're in a nonmonogamous relationship.)

What do you need to know about getting one? We asked Dr. Laura MacIsaac, MD, MPH and director of family planning for the Mount Sinai Health Systems, to give us a primer.

Mount Sinai provides roughly 1,000 IUDs a year, and according to MacIsaac, they're "the most effective [birth control] with the least amount of side effects."

What is an IUD, and how does it work?

An IUD is a small, often T-shaped device that's inserted into the uterus to prevent pregnancy. It uses either hormones or copper to thicken cervical mucus to block sperm from fertilizing the egg.

Insertion

The procedure of getting an IUD inserted, while brief, can be painful for women who haven't had children yet and therefore haven't had their cervix dilated. In that case, MacIsaac normally recommends a high dose of Motrin with food before the procedure.

The two main categories of IUDs: hormonal and copper.

"The bleeding pattern is the biggest difference, and duration of action is second," says MacIsaac of the two options.

The four hormonal products, which MacIsaac describes as "sisters that are much more the same than different," all use levonorgestrel, a progestin hormone, which goes into the uterus and is not systemic—meaning it's undetectable in the blood stream. "When people hear 'hormonal IUD' they think hormonal birth control and they think the pill, and that it has all the same risks as the pill, which is completely wrong thinking," MacIsaac explains.

These IUDs use different doses of the hormone, which affect how long they last and how much they suppress your period. Mirena and Kyleena are approved for five years and Liletta and Skyla, for three. With Liletta and Mirena, about 20 percent of women see their period stop after a year, compared to 6% with Skyla and 12% with Kyleena. The patient experience is roughly the same, says MacIsaac.

The copper option, ParaGard, lasts for 10 years and is hormone-free. Women who have heavy periods and cramping should know its major side effect is it makes periods even heavier and cramps worse.

"If it's a purely economic argument, there's no question that the copper IUD wins, because it has the longest duration of action and it's the less expensive," says MacIsaac.

Getting it removed

Once you remove your IUD, you regain fertility immediately. Any physician or nurse practitioner can remove it, so if you were to lose your health insurance under Trump, as long as you can get to a doctor's office and pay the appointment fee, you can take care of it.

Is there anyone who shouldn't get one?

"There are only a few contraindications," says MacIsaac. For some women with an irregular shape to their uterus, called a uterine anomaly, an IUD often doesn't stay in well, she says. A patient who has breast cancer shouldn't use a hormonal IUD, because lab studies have shown the levonorgestrel could stimulate tumor growth in cancer cells.

PATRIOTS SORELY LACKING IMPACT PLAYERS ON DEFENSE

Matt Burke is the National Sports Editor and a columnist at Metro US.

Follow him on Twitter
@burke_metro

Sunday night's 31-24 loss to the Seahawks at Gillette Stadium should have been a wake-up call for all Patriots fans. This defense is not only not good enough to win a Super Bowl as presently constructed, but it's also a defense that could absolutely cause an early exit from the playoffs.

The Raiders, a team scoring 27.2 points per game right now, could absolutely light up the Gillette scoreboard in a divisional or conference championship game. Ditto for the Kansas City Chiefs and the Denver Broncos, two teams with mediocre offenses that would suddenly own legit offenses if they were lucky enough to meet up with the Pats' horrid D.

Even a team like the Ravens should scare Pats fans after what we witnessed Sunday night. "Average Joe" Flacco is "heating up" after all, and he's had success in the past in Foxboro against Patriots defenses that were much better than this one.

Now, the Pats suck-ups will tell you this week that there's no cause for alarm, and they will continue to remind you that the team did the right thing by letting Darrelle Revis walk away in March 2015 (I won't even get into the Jamie

The Patriots' lackluster defense was no match for Seattle, and could be the Achilles' heel that keeps them out of the Super Bowl this season. BOSTON GLOBE VIA GETTY IMAGES Collins and Chandler Jones stuff today).

The Revis gloating is with merit as he is a bottom-tier cornerback now, and the Pats absolutely cut the cord at the right time. But many forget that the Patriots also once employed Aqib Talib, currently the secondary anchor for a Broncos defense that remains the best in football.

When the Pats lost Talib to the Broncos in free agency in March of 2014, they turned around and replaced him with Revis. But when Revis walked out the door, who replaced him?

Yes, Malcolm Butler is a very good cornerback and he was the least of the Pats' worries against the Seahawks Sunday night as he played an outstanding game. But wouldn't it have been nice to have had Butler as the No. 2 corner? Wouldn't it have been nice to have had Logan Ryan on the bench?

When the Patriots traded for Talib in 2012 he alone changed the entire dynamic of the Pats' defense. Revis did the same thing two seasons later. Butler is a fine player, but he is not that force of nature this defense sorely needs.

It seems that Bill Belichick is oddly obsessed with the idea of winning with a no-name defense, a defense in which no one player racks up too many sexy stats like interceptions and sacks.

The Patriots as a team have just five interceptions on the year (24th in the league). They also have just 16 sacks as a team (also 24th in the league).

Maybe defensive coordinator Matt Patricia is part of the problem, but let's be honest: This defensive roster is not exactly loaded with talent.

Defensive lineman Malcom Brown, who the Pats drafted in the first round in 2015, had two sacks against the Browns a month ago and he hasn't been heard from since. Rob Ninkovich has been MIA since he returned a month ago. Devin McCourty has been underwhelming. Patrick Chung has been underwhelming. Barkevious Mingo can't get on the field.

It should be noted that Belichick has never won a Super Bowl without impact players on his defenses. There was Revis in 2014, and names like Law, Harrison, Seymour, Bruschi, McGinest and Vrabel for the first three.

Where is that impact player this year?

The last five Super Bowl champions (Broncos, Patriots, Seahawks, Ravens, Giants) won it all thanks, in large part, to top-flight defenses. This defense is far from top-flight, and it's why Patriots fans today should be hesitant before booking early February flights to Houston.

Aries It's a good day to get things done. Work independently if it will deter others from slowing you down. A short trip will give you something to think about.

Taurus A change at work shouldn't disrupt your productivity. Hunker down and finish whatever you are responsible for. What you accomplish will secure your position.

Gemini If you make plans that will challenge you mentally, physically and emotionally, you will attract interesting people. Try to help others, but don't get taken for granted.

Cancer Secret matters are best kept that way. Someone will try to disclose information that will be harmful to your plans. Don't overspend when trying to impress others.

Leo Bringing about change that you believe is necessary will encourage new friendships and a better understanding of gratitude. Speak on behalf of those who cannot.

Virgo You need to pay more attention to what's going on at your home and within your relationships. Go out of your way to keep the peace and put others at ease.

Libra Changes at home will encourage greater cash flow. Check out your vocational options and pick up information that will help you improve your earning potential.

Scorpio You have to show strength and courage if you want to get ahead. Don't let anyone take control or coax you to overspend. Do your own thing and avoid discord.

Sagittarius Partnerships are best dealt with openly. Don't be afraid to share your feelings and to let others know where you stand and what your intentions are.

Capricorn You must keep things in perspective. It will be easy to miscalculate, leaving you at odds in any given situation involving others. Self-improvement is your best bet.

Aquarius You should take an energetic approach to your life, responsibilities and personal and professional goals. The more you do, the more you will get in return.

Pisces Giving false information or divulging personal secrets will put you in a vulnerable position. Protect yourself against being misinterpreted. EUGENIA LAST
